DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

For nearly a Century
the Medical Profession have approved this as the best and safest remedy for Acidity of the Stomach, Heartburn, Headache, Gout and Indigestion. Dinneford's Magnesia is also an aperient of unequalled value for infants, children, those of delicate constitution, and for the distressing sickness of pending motherhood.
THE MOST EFFECTIVE APERIENT FOR REGULAR USE BY PEOPLE OF ALL AGES.
In consequence of numerous imitations, purchasers should INSIST on seeing the name 'DINNEFORD'S' on every bottle. Only by so doing can they be sure of obtaining this most excellent remedy.
Dinneford's Magnesia mixed with Spring Water forms a pleasant, cooling and most beneficial drink in Hot Seasons and Climates, and also during Fever.

Absolutely unique in their qualities.

Have YOU danced to the finest band in Town?

JAZZ CHATS (4).

By Mrs. HENRI (Promoter of these Dances).

To dance in the cool of a summer's evening is, to my way of thinking, perfection—that is, of course, providing the ballroom selected can offer all the benefits of the fresh air. Unfortunately, most dance places in Town are built underground, or, at any rate, very far indeed from any cooling breeze.

We are more favoured here as the ballroom is perched right above the housetops and on the warmest evening we dance and remain as cool as the proverbial cucumber.

So that solves for us the problem of summer dancing.

By the way, have you heard my wonderful Jazz Band? If not, visit us just once, and I feel convinced you will become one of my "Seasons." The little sketch on the left is of Joe Ball, my Trombone Player.

PRE-WAR OPINION
(Confirmed by hundreds of Officers on active service).

"I cycle-camped for a month through France, Switzerland and Germany with a friend. We met with all sorts of weather, but the tent proved to be perfectly watertight. I am 6 ft. 2 ins. and my friend well above the average, but we found the accommodation inside the tent ample, even in wet weather. The double roof keeps out the heaviest rain indefinitely. The tent is very strongly and carefully made, and wonderfully cheap."

The Beauty Maker.

The Beautifying virtue of Palm Oil was well known to the ladies of ancient Rome. Obtained from the mystic East, its daily use enabled them to retain the appearance of youth until long past the age when wrinkles and other facial blemishes usually show themselves. Olive Oil, also, is justly renowned as a skin food.

PALMOLIVE

is a combination of both these wonderful oils, saponified by a secret process so that they become a tablet of exquisite pale-green soap.

The creamy lather of PALMOLIVE, charged with beauty-giving properties, obtained from the Palm and the Olive, cleanses, nourishes, and beautifies the skin.

PALMOLIVE has been described over and over again by ladies who use it as "The Beauty Maker."

Put aside toilet preparations and try PALMOLIVE—it will delight you.

Palmolive can be purchased at most Chemists and High-Class Stores.

Price 7½d. per large Tablet.

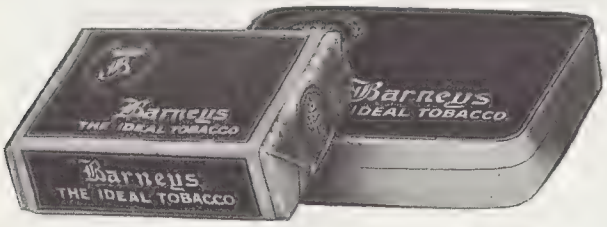
Beneath, a Portrait of two popular Barney's sizes—the 1 ounce "TRIAL" Lead packet, and the 2 ounce convenient FLAT TIN which fits the pocket so nicely that you can discard your pouch. Barney's is also packed in 4, 8 and 16 ounce Tins at 11½d. the ounce throughout.



Real Tobacco, from the North!

Not all Tobaccos are real. Some are camouflage containing "substitutes" and artificial "flavourings."

"Substitute" is a Trade term to indicate an inferior growth used in place of a rare and costly leaf. Flavouring is a device to make bad leaf appear good. When Tobacco is flavoured it needs it.

Barney's is real Tobacco, innocent of substitutes and artificial flavouring. Its fragrance, coolness and smoothness are natural attributes of the superb growths which make the blend.

This "Barney's from the North Country" makes fresh friends every week. It is probable that a Trial will bring you on its side. It suits 70% of Pipe Smokers.

Medium in flavour, coarsely cut, with a rich amber-and-black colour; fragrant alike in Tin and Pipe; a good listener to the Club-room chat; pleasant company when you tramp across the fields; real good honest stuff which seasoned pipe-men are glad to know and make known.

FILL THE BARNEY'S WAY: hold the pipe in the left hand. Fill with the right, a little at a time. Use the third or little finger to give a gentle, even pressure throughout the Bowl. Filled this way, ordinary Tobacco is improved; with Barney's, you need one match only to start you on a joy-smoke lasting 20 minutes easily, and finishing with dry ash which falls from the pipe. Barney's smokers rarely need to "knock."

Barney's is sold by the best Shops only in most Towns under the Makers' guarantee (enclosed in each size) to replace free any out-of-condition package and refund the Sender's Postage.

If your regular Tobacconist does not already stock Barney's, he can obtain supplies specially for you. Ask him to do so.

11½d. the oz.: in 1 oz. lead packets and 2, 4, 8, and 16 oz. Tins.

(8) TO THE TRADE.—Supplies of Barney's can be obtained through your usual Wholesaler, from Henry Scholey Ltd., 8 Regent Street, Waterloo Place, S.W. 1., or direct from the Manufacturers:—

Home Problems

THE German counter-proposals seem to have fallen rather flat—a sign of the times, indeed, for with Foch and Robertson on the Rhine we are not worrying overmuch what Rantzau and his satellites say or write—even if it's ten times the 500 pages they say their proposed "amendments" run to. And, really, it would be just as well if the public mind would turn to consider seriously for a while a few of the Home Problems that confront us. Transport trouble getting worse, Coal Commission still unfinished, police unrest, demobilised soldiers wanting work and some place to live, still no whiskey, still bad beer, and "the price of things" still more than 100 per cent. up—it's high time some evidence became visible that at least one of these things might right itself before the year is out.

"BUBBLES"—GERMAN VARIETY
(With apologies to anybody who'd like to have them)

Why Not?

MEANWHILE, I am waiting (vainly, I fear) for one or two things—for some patriotic landlord to evict a Cabinet Minister; for an enterprising burglar to steal his car; for some kind friend to find him "the only available lodgings," say at North Finchley, and for the local coal merchant to refuse to supply him. And if this could only happen to all the "Diddleburys"—well, somehow I fancy things would begin to move a bit! As for the latest from Kurdistan where it is reported that British officers and men have been cut off owing to intrigue on the part of the Young Turks, words fail one to describe the obvious inadequacy of the steps taken to deal with the tribesmen who are apparently to be "overawed" by a "display of force" on the part of the Mesopotamian Army. More "Diddlebury"!

Cold Comfort

HAVING just got off the No. 6 in a state of extreme exhaustion, and being engaged in readjusting my clothes, which had almost been torn from my body by the crowd at the Hackney terminus, I wanted a few kind words. I asked Gawber whether he could say anything to poultice me. "Serve you (foaming) well right," replied my labouring friend. "Toffs like you ought to take taxis instead of doing a pore widder and orfin out of her seat in the 'bus. It's the like of you as block the (gory) traffic, and it'll be along o' your sort there'll be another strike."

"Don't," I murmured, weakly. "Don't say those tyrannical conductors. . . ."

"'Old yer row!" roared Bill. "Tyrannical be (obturated). My brother-in-law as runs the old 18 to Willesden, 'e says your lot gives him the sick."

"He gives me the sick," I replied, spiritedly. "He treads on our feet. He. . . ."

"And what about your (patchy) plates of meat?" asked Bill. "Think he likes to 'ave five of you in a row trampling him like (scarlet) buffaloes? an' askin' if the King's Cross 'bus goes to the Albert 'All? He's going to strike for sixteen insides 'stead of twenty-one. So let the (punctured) companies get 'buses from France. Captain Guest offered 'em a lot three months ago."

"Oh, let 'em strike. I'm done up. Perhaps it's hard on the conductors to have twenty-one insides. Perhaps they ache."

Fine Arts

"WELL, Sir John," I said, "I'm afraid you'll rue having sold Oxshire Hall."

"Why?" asked the chronic plutocrat. "I made a profit. And, you know, I'm going to build myself a town house instead."

"That's just it. You won't be able to build it as you choose. Rumour says a Minister of Fine Arts will be appointed before the year's out."

"That won't worry me."

"No? You'll have to put up your plans and have them turned down because there isn't a bathroom for the tweenie. You'll have to have a front garden if your neighbour does, so as not to spoil the harmony of the street. You'll have to send in chits to the Brick Controller, the Paint Controller, the Sashline Controller. This is peace, Sir John, not war; one can't do as one chooses in peace-time."

The super-profiteer looked at me pityingly. "My boy," he said, "you'll never grow up. Let them appoint a Minister! Surely he will have an architect nephew; I'll employ him. He will have inspectors; I'll dine them. And if that doesn't do it, I'll give away a room (for a fortnight) to the Society for Emigrating Reformed Cuthberts, and pass as a Government office."

Yes! this last would settle the beauty stunt.

Bow-Wow!

"SIR," said Diddlebury (M.P. if we go Bolshie), "so you have your wish. The Dogs Bill is through. The friend of man is, in the name of pseudo-science, to be subjected to every fiendish torture that Coalition doctors can devise. You have, sir, established vivisection in a land of humanity."

"Oh, do shut up," I said. "You know that's all my eye. You know quite well that under this Bill no dog can be vivisected except by a doctor who has a special licence. You know also that henceforth no dog may be used if any other animal will serve."

A "COME DOWN"

LENIN (to Trotsky): "And not a single thing in sight to save us!"

"Would you sacrifice your dog?" asked Diddlebury, tragically.

I thought for a moment, and replied, "By the way, Didd, I haven't seen your pug lately. How is he?"

"He is—ahem!—I gave him away."

"To whom?"

"I decline to answer."

"Oh? Let me see, your brother does medical research, doesn't he?"

"I repel your insinuation," roared the Liberal. Then, after a pause. "My brother found it difficult to get a dog. Besides, Ponto bit me."

In that case it doesn't matter; Ponto would have died anyway.

"Blessings and Kisses"

THE Housing Bill having now passed through its various stages in the Commons and reached those "years"—or, rather, in its case, weeks—"of discretion" which entitle it to the consideration of my lords in the Upper House, one may hope that at last those who intend to do so will "get a move on" and provide a few habitations for the homeless. Apropos of which it is to be hoped that the demobilised soldier will be given a fair chance when it comes to the allotment of the new dwelling-places. Too many men have come back to "no work and no home," and, regrettable as they are, the Government can only expect the kind of demonstrations that took place last week at Westminster if nothing is done. It ought to be made quite clear at once that the ex-service man will get preference when new houses are built. It is up to the country to remember in every respect the pledges that were given to the men who volunteered when they went out to fight, and to redeem those promises of "blessings and kisses," so glibly given, in song and otherwise, in a concrete—or at least "bricks and mortar"—form.

International Publicity

CZECHO-SLOVAKIA, young and inexperienced State though she may be, is no tyro where publicity is concerned. I don't suppose the average man knows much—if anything—about her, and the ordinary Englishman is inclined to consider the inhabitants of any State with such a name hailing from the Near East as something little removed from "dagos." However, it won't be the Czechs' fault if we don't know them soon enough, what with their reviews and pamphlets and notices which are being spread broadcast over the country. I hope they will pierce our "insularity," for we are all too much inclined to emulate the horrid example of a certain public school cricket secretary, who, on being asked for a fixture by some lesser school, replied, "Eton we know and Harrow we know, but who are you?"

The Police Trouble

IF we are to believe those who should know, the policeman's life, these days, is an even more unhappy one than it was in the days of Gilbert! There are various subsidiary clauses in the scheme of his present wants, but the main thing would appear to be the recognition of the Union, the members of which, we are told, now number some 50,000. The Home Secretary stated last week that this concession could not be granted—and the refusal was distinctly a flat one. That may be, but I am inclined to think that in the end, as usual in these times, the said Home Secretary will have to give way. Which is a pity. Because we have always been proud of the Force, and tended to regard it much in the same way as the Army and the Navy—wherein, we take it, even in these Union-ocratic days, we do not anticipate strikes or the subversion of authority.

Between the Dances

PRINCE HENRY AS A POLO PLAYER

Youth's Own Season

It is going very joyously and happily this season of seasons. Myself, I cannot recall any time that was so essentially a young folks' season. People are coming up from the country and taking houses for the sole purpose of giving their girls a good time after four years' work and anxiety. Many of them can't really afford it, but, as one mother said to me, "My girls have been in hospitals ever since the beginning without a break. They worked like Trojans, and it is only fair they should have some fun and brightness now." They are certainly getting it. One of the girls told me, "I should have come out three years ago, so it's all fresh to me, and everything is just one thrill." This is the spirit right through—to make up for the labour and misery William of Hohenzollern heaped on us all. But gay and sparkling as the dances and the parties may be—and there are no blasé people yet—you see the joyousness of it all nowhere as in the Row o' mornings. In these last days it has been a sheer delight to see the girls and boys, vivid with enjoyment, cantering up and down in the radiant sunshine under the new green of the trees—youth, a procession of youth and the joie de vivre. There is no setting like Hyde Park, and there is no capital in the world which gives you the same picture, the same sensation as a May morning in Rotten Row. Laurence Binyon caught it and imprisoned it in these words:

O summer sun, O moving trees!
O cheerful human noise, O busy glittering street!
What hour shall Fate in all the future find,
Or what delights, ever to equal these:
Only to taste the warmth, the light, the wind,
Only to be alive, and feel that life is sweet?

The last line could serve for the motto of this Peace season, "Only to be alive, and feel that life is sweet."

MR. H. G. HAWKER

Leaving Buckingham Palace after his interview with the King, who decorated both him and Commander Grieve with the R.A.F. Cross

THE CROWD AT KING'S CROSS AND (inset) HAWKER ON A "TWO-SEATER"

Hawker and Grieve had a wonderful reception, as all the world knows, on their arrival in London last week, and above are some impressions of what happened. A powerful car was waiting to take Hawker to the Aero Club, but he had to use instead a single horse-power—horse!—on which, with the help of the police, he was rescued from his friends

BYSTANDER COMMENTS (concluded)

And for those who have come back there never was such sweetness.

Pigs in S'pokes

IT is a wary world, my masters, a very wary world with all sorts of Tom Tiddler grounds if you only know how to be a Tommy Tiddler. Motor-bicycles and motor-cars which have seen Army service are being sold at auction by the Government. Some of the prices fetched are staggering. When you see a "junk" motor-bike minus a wheel and with its engine obviously kept together with twine and wire, or a motor minus a back-axle and other things that make the wheels go round, getting more than the maker's original prices you wonder why. Since no examination is permitted everybody who buys buys "a pig in a poke." But something happens afterwards which shows that if silk purses can't be made out of sows' ears well-lined pockets can be had from these same "pigs in s'pokes." Likewise, that out of the apparently little much is to be made by the truly enterprising and skilful. This is what happens. Out of several "junk" bikes or cars a clever workman can make one, two, perhaps three, "as good as new" machines or motors. These he can sell at the fancy prices now obtaining. And, lo! in addition he has sacks and sacks of "spares," which not only gladden the heart of the distracted motor owner, but bring many pennies to the enterprising one's coffers, since their selling price is also fantastic. This is what is being done, and this is why you see decrepit and apparently useless bikes and cars bought by the score at the Government auctions—another chapter in the History of Human Ingenuity.

"FINISHING TOUCHES"

No Pleasing Some People—

IN these days the daily paper and half the people you meet make you feel that the farmer's description of his wife of "never being really happy unless she's a-grousing and a-nittering," could be applied to us as a nation. I wonder how many people "ought to have been shot" according to public opinion because we were not prepared for war, and because of shell and other shortages? Just dozens and dozens. Now, we have the other side of the medal, and all the shooting and hanging is being passed on to luckless members of the Government whose thousands and thousands of pounds' worth of preparations for the continuation of the war were brought to a sudden standstill by the armistice.

—And the Reason Why

BUT much as one may deplore this kind of unfair criticism—and it is, of course, unfair in many instances—there is no getting away from certain facts upon which the public have a perfect right to "grouse." The now authentic case of the "scrapping" of whole aeroplanes at Bedford and the abandonment to the mercy of the weather and consequent rust of spare parts of these expensive engines of war, the Cippenham Depôt scandal, and the continued over-staffing of Government offices, are only a few cases in point, but they are more than enough to go on with, in all conscience! The difficulty is, of course, the old one, that public opinion so seldom hits the happy mean, and quite legitimate and unavoidable "waste" on the part of some departments which "suffered" in that respect from a sudden cessation of hostilities gets a "strafing" because other sorts of "waste" were inexcusable.

Towns and the Possible "Crash"

THE regulations as to flying over towns are all very well, but how are they going to be enforced when there is a general aerial passenger service which will be an established fact before we are much older? You can't have police-traps up in the sky. Perhaps it will end in towns being enclosed in wire netting after the manner of Buckingham Palace during the Zeppelin period. By the way, here is a fact that deserves historical record. Flying is the one form of mechanical locomotion that has never been jeered at by the public or opposed with blind and unreasoning prejudice. The suggestion of railway trains roused such bitter feeling that quite sane people prophesied the beginning of the end of the world. Some of us have a vivid recollection of the first motor-car that went through London. It was preceded by a man carrying a red flag, as if it were a restive steam-roller, and went its somewhat gasping and noisy way amid the hoots and scorn of the populace. If my memory does not play me a trick Mr. Heinemann, the publisher, was in that car. In these days of grace and enlightenment the same authorities which ordained the four-mile-an-hour speed-limit and the precedence of the red flag make tarred roads for motorists! So doubtless they will soon be considering some means of protecting towns from the possible unintended descents of aeroplanes, and I have a vision of queues of County and Municipal Councillors waiting outside Mr. Heath Robinson's studio for ideas.

The Penalties of Aerial Popularity

If they did that to the men who tried to fly the Atlantic, what on earth will they do to the man who succeeds?

"IN ENGLAND-NOW!"

A WEEKLY LETTER FROM "BLANCHE." Illustrated by HELEN McKIE

LONDON, June 2, 1919

DEAR COUSIN—

THIS is "Derby Week"—in other words, we've arrived at the summit, the zenith, the climax, the tip-top, the very meridian of that so indefinable and yet so definite institution, the London Season.

卐 卐

A SEASON that's surely quite the most amazing thing of all the amazingness of these amazing five years. Picture to yourself. . . . Hardly a home or a family in all Europe (excluding, of course, the few mere neutrals) that is not in mourning or does not own some maimed and battered man. . . . Our food supplies more "profiteered" in than ever, the price of the commonest necessities ruinous, transport of goods and people worse than in the worst days of the war. . . .

卐 卐

AND a quite dreadfully tactless person, terrified by the Peace "Beano" preparations, calls attention to the fact that though we're celebrating Peace all right, we haven't exactly got Peace—with some twenty-three "little" wars going strong and the Paris peace-makers lapsed into a tideless sea of argument with the "beaten" Hun.

卐 卐

BUT do any of these small details worry us any? Not on your life, they don't. Same as it was the war of wars, so is this the Season of Seasons. We've washed out, as if they never were, pre-war standards, pre-war ideas, pre-war numbers. The rush to go racing, for instance, is such, here in England now, that imagination boggles at the thought of how they'll get there and where they'll find foothold when they do get there, all the hundreds of thousands determined, though the heavens fall, to go to the Derby on Wednesday.

卐 卐

EVERYTHING now's on the colossal scale—with costs to correspond. Courts are wiped off the social calendar and garden-parties put in their stead, because it's beyond mere puny human power to arrange that all the would-be-presented-at-Courts should curtsey before Majesty! Society was once a set. It's now a mob. And so an invitation to the Buckingham Palace Garden-Party now washes out the whole long and personal (and fearfully expensive) matter of presentation.

卐 卐

IN the spacious gardens of the Palace, in a crowd running into thousands, one may not even set eyes on the Royals.

"The square-brogued shoe of the tweeded enthusiast from Golder's Green"

"On the Guards' habit of marrying actresses"

In any case, the chances of getting presented are of the smallest. But it makes no matter. The Lord Chamberlain's office has been speeded up with the rest. An invitation now counts as a presentation Less picturesque, but a lovely hustle, isn't it?

卐 卐

IT is not, I think, so much that Society has altered its ways as that Society's gates have been pushed open, and now everyone does what Society does—or as much so as can be managed. Take only the opera. In Victorian and Edwardian days a Society function only. But then came along Beecham, spending what the people had paid for pills on giving the people yet another dope—opera at popular prices.

卐 卐

AND now, even at Covent Garden, tho there it's still more or less of an enclosure, you may see Putney cheek by jowl with Mayfair, Oxford Street blouses next door to Paris "creations," the square-brogued shoe of the tweeded enthusiast from Golder's Green tapping the same floor as the high-heeled, buckled and brocaded one from Bond Street. Why, last week, they even let the public in to see a polo match at Hurlingham!

卐 卐

TRUE, it was, I believe, for some charity or other, and they're not, I am assured, going to make a practice of it. Still. . . . Sufficiently neoteric, wasn't it? And not a decade ago would have shaken the very vitals of that Society which—so's to try and put the kibosh on the Guards' habit of marrying actresses—had made an iron rule (still in force, by the way) that no one who'd been on the stage or written a book or a song or done anything workish or public could be presented at Court.

卐 卐

"The Savage Club's great fancy ball at the Albert Hall"

ALWAYS was, of course, a mixed show, the Derby. Not so very long ago, in fact, since it was also "no ladies' meeting"—but we've changed all that, needless to say. A vast, heterogeneous assembly, wonderfully English, terribly noisy, a standing monument of what the Englishman will do and dare—and suffer—in the great cause of Sport. Personally, this noise, this huge concourse of humanity under the blue vault of heaven that blots to one moving blackness the undulant green downs of Epsom, this too, too democratic race-meeting leaves me cold. I prefer to plunge in more secluded waters, such as Newmarket, for instance, or York or Sandown or Ascot. Fortunate, isn't it, that nothing differs like tastes?

卐 卐

BUT it really is a post-war super-Derby Week that includes (for the first time since 1914) the Trooping of the Colour for the King's Birthday; the Savage Club's great fancy ball at the Albert Hall (Prince of Wales, as Savage Chief, has taken a box); the wedding at St. Margaret's, Westminster, of Lady Diana Manners, who permits, you know, no bridesmaid over six at her picturesque nuptials.

卐 卐

AND the Mays at Cambridge—which once sedatish citadel of learning is in the throes of such a May week as it's never imagined. Young America is there, you see, and the Navy—convivial and well-cousined elements, both. . . . And a stream of dances, four and five every night; and a new "light" Beecham opera season setting in. . . . Even amongst all these there remains one function which I understand is heard of but hasn't yet been touched by that awesome flood of democracy that's washing so much away—the Fourth at Eton.

卐 卐

THOUGH even at Eton. . . . I hear of an Economy Committee that turns the icy optic on to passionate socks and approveth not of the gaudy waistcoat even for what one of them calls "the first real Fourth for five whole years, Blanche." And warns Etonians, most depressingly, to remember that, even for him, through dire necessity, "changes may be wrought in the not-far-distant future" far greater than can be effected, even by an Eton Economy Committee. Which sounds very frightening, doesn't it, tho' it is the fashion of youth, of course, always to look on the black side, to weep and wail from very wantonness?

卐 卐

CAN'T something be done, by-the-way, to stop the threatened influx of American tourists to the battle-scenes of France? For it's a gruesome and a ghoulish thought, isn't it—those tidy veils, those neat "street suits," those kodaks, those enquiring minds, those spectacled eyes that know not the bitterness of our bitter war, those well-shod feet tramping in hordes over those fields of France that held our hearts—and broke them—for five long weary war years? At least let our Government see to it that England sees first where her sons fought and fell. Before they let loose the tourists. . . .

卐 卐

AS for the dancing craze here in England now, though we jazz not through the green and golden days now June is here, there is no single night that does not resound to the tune of syncopated music. And how awfully pretty and varied and intriguing is the dancing of the day—especially when the dancers are in fancy dress. For then l'abandon is added to grace, with delightful, if perhaps slightly dégagé effect. At the Albert Hall Women's Ball last week—for that most deserving of objects, the Chelsea Hospital for Women—charming effects were more obvious than enthusiasm. It was a "Society" dance, you see, and those who rave of the Sins of Mayfair ought really to have been given a box or something—for such decorum, at a Fancy Dress Ball, have I seldom, indeed never met. High-born maidens clustered in groups, and so did men—but not in the same groups! Which gave a chilling, not to say nipping, nuance to the atmosphere.

卐 卐

ALSO—well, though the lithe god Pan was well to the fore in the "revels" that Lady Lavery "arranged," his friend Bacchus had got another engagement or something. Anyway, the sobriety of the gathering even nearly exceeded the propriety. Which is saying some! And on even those who did imbibe vinous liquors no sequent was observable. For the alleged "claret cup" (at some twelve bob or thereabouts a small jug) was of that extra-special "war" variety that is such a feature of our "Peace."

"Those kodaks"

THE RETURN

BY CAPTAIN A. B. HARROWER

BETWEEN the signing of the Armistice and the conclusion of Peace (as far as my memory serves a matter of some six months or so) I had knocked about in and around London, occasionally putting in a little work at the offices of a Ministry to which I was attached—I presume as a kind of slight award for long, though not particularly meritorious service on many fronts. But the habit of travel compulsorily acquired during the Great War failed to leave me, as happened with so many others in the same boat as myself, at first only too anxious to settle down again to an office-cum-suburbia existence. And so, when I was at last free of the Army, with what little capital I could scrape together, I decided to chance my arm in Canada—in what capacity was not then very clear. At any rate, I sailed in the first available boat for Montreal.

The events of the next five or six years would make too long a story to be free from boredom. They are common to many another man who had the hardihood to cut himself free from the trammels of these islands in those congested days, and are sufficiently trite, therefore, to warrant omission in detail. It is enough to say that I struck "a good thing," stuck to it, and after five years of solid work had piled up a large enough balance at the bank to warrant a holiday.

And so the month of May, 1925, found me homeward-bound once more, pleased enough to find myself a saloon passenger, and on the 17th of that month, at about four in the afternoon, a taxi carried me swiftly away from Euston to the Savoy.

The country was in what some historians and nearly all newspapers call the "throes" of a General Election. It was refreshing to find that the apathy of the last one I remembered—in December, 1918—had been replaced by something of the old-fashioned enthusiasm. In a corner in the Savoy lounge I was pleasantly surprised to see my old friend Moore. He was sitting quite alone sipping tea and immersed in the latest popular best-seller, "The Perfect Gent." He greeted me warmly, but looked tired. When I had seen him last he had been famous as one of the most amusing minute-writers in the Air Ministry, and a major, though he had never flown in his life except maybe as a passenger.

After the preliminaries of conversation usual on such occasions I asked him what he was doing these days. "Well, at the moment I'm resting," he replied, wearily, "or trying to. You see, I'm standing for Lower Surbiton, and have had a fairly strenuous week. They're counting the poll now, I suppose. The result will be proclaimed to-night—though there's not the slightest doubt about it, absolutely none at all." And he lay back and closed his eyes. "Cheer up, old chap," I said, "it's not so bad as that. You never know your luck with the voter. I expect you'll pull it off all right, if the truth were known."

"Pull it off!" Moore jerked up on his chair. "Pull it off!" he repeated. "I should jolly well think so. It's a foregone conclusion. But then, of course, you've been away for five years. Oh, there's no doubt about that—no possible, probable, shadow of doubt whatever. Poor old Smith's an excellent lawyer, and can make a pretty speech—he's my so-called opponent, you know—but he simply hasn't an earthly. He knows it, too. Very sporting of him to give me a run for my money, especially as he's a dead cert to lose his £150 deposit. No, I'll be sitting in the House all right this time next month. What worries me is the fêting I've still got to go through. It's a bit wearing."

For the moment I thought Moore must be suffering from some kind of nervous trouble that takes the form of megalomania, over-confidence, and so forth. But he didn't give me much time to think. He finished his tea and got up quickly. "Well, I suppose I must go and face the music," he said. "By the way, if you've an evening to spare, drop down to Surbiton to-night and see the show. Incidentally, you might be able to rescue me from my friends. About nine, if you can. You'll find me by the cheering round the Town Hall."

So I went. I was intensely intrigued to find out if Moore was really going to win by such a thumping majority as he expected.

After an early dinner I took train from Waterloo and arrived at Surbiton at 8.30. The little town was packed with excited crowds, and as I struggled out of the station, cheer upon cheer broke out from the neighbourhood of the Town Hall. Turning the corner into the main street I saw the reason. A large placard in front of the building was just being put up. On it I read:

RESULT:

Moore	9,542
Smith	0
Majority	9,542

It was the most extraordinary election result I had ever seen, and I struggled forward to try and catch the remarks which my friend, who had just appeared on the balcony in company with the Mayor and officials, was making to his riverside constituents.

About 9.30 I managed to find Moore—alone for a few minutes in his room at the local hotel. I congratulated him heartily on his magnificent win. "Thank God, it's all over," he said. But his distressed apathy of the afternoon had vanished. He ordered drinks and over a whiskey and soda I asked him: "Now do tell an unfortunate wanderer how this kind of thing comes about. It's simply amazing."

"Oh! I'm so sorry," he said, "I thought you must have heard. You see the point is that last month the final Government honours list was published—the last one dealing with the war. And I wasn't in it, that's all." "But what's that got to do with your extraordinary popularity?" I asked. "My dear old chap," he said, "it's obvious. Having been omitted—I heard afterwards by a pure accident, which the precious Government infinitely regretted—I'm the only ex-Ministerial employee who remains undecorated. I'm not even an M.B.E. It's a unique distinction, and Surbiton is so proud of it that they've elected me M.P. nem. com. That's all."

"My God!" I said. It seemed to be the only appropriate remark.

THERE is a frivolous axiom to the effect that the play's the thing. It originated, of course, with my eccentric old friend, Will Shakespeare, but it is quoted by some people so often that they end by each believing himself the author of it, and some of them get frightfully annoyed accordingly if you show signs of questioning its canonical authority. The opening of the New Winter Garden Theatre, however, appears to be a historical event that dwarfs the theatrical production involved to merely minor proportions. There is first the very natural solicitude of the management that the public shall know the whereabouts of London's new landmark, and so we are informed that the theatre stands on the site of the old Middlesex Music Hall, anciently the Mogul Tavern. And in case you should have any difficulty in finding the place after that, a drawing of the house in Drury Lane in which Nell Gwynn used to lodge in 1660 is offered, doubtless as collateral evidence.

MESSRS. GROSSMITH and Laurillard take this opportunity of calling public attention to the "vast enterprise" of their firm, which owns three London theatres, and leases others from time to time when there is a chance of producing a good thing. I take it, however, that a man who has only one theatre—and who can only just make the ghost walk there—is quite as likely to produce an amusing play as a man who has bought, say, the Thespian street. The Grossmith and Laurillard partnership has, of course, been a phenomenal success, and it is natural that they should want to crow about it. But as they are not sharing their profits with us on the fifty-fifty basis we playgoers are mainly interested in the entertainments they produce for our amusement.

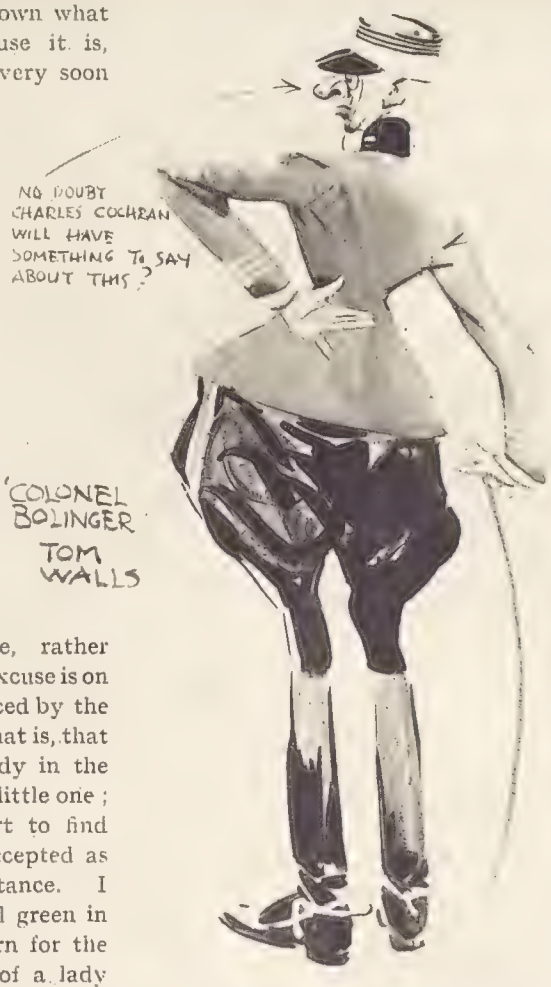
THUS we come to Kissing Time itself, which is just the bright breezy kind of play that made the old Gaiety so deservedly popular. It contains the usual story which is not new enough to strain the mental powers of the audiences; while a friend of mine who understands his subject tells me that the music of Mr. Ivan Caryll is tuneful without being ambitious. As might have been expected, therefore, from a firm rather given to boast of its commercial efficiency, the production is businesslike in all respects. Messrs. Grossmith and Laurillard have a fine perception of what the public want, and they have exceptional facilities for delivering the goods. They have had the luck to secure once again the services of Mr. Leslie Henson, who was wantonly taken from his very useful job of keeping our spirits up, to add to the fighting weight of the B.E.F. Still, the war authorities may, of course, have known what they were about, because it is, I believe, the fact that very soon after Mr. Henson joined the army the Germans threw up the sponge. It would seem to be a clear case of cause and effect.



MR. HENSON is here a French soldier, named Bibi St. Pol. He comes home to Fontainebleau under a cloud. His wife, Georgette, has heard that he has been flirting, not, it may be, pour le bon motif, with another lady, and she receives him, therefore, rather coldly. Bibi's ingenious excuse is on all fours with that advanced by the historical servant girl. That is, that although there was a lady in the case, she was only a very little one; and he seems quite hurt to find that this detail is not accepted as an extenuating circumstance. I am, of course, young and green in these matters, and I learn for the first time that the size of a lady bears any relation to her ability to make trouble. If it be so, however, the chap who likes his ladies large and plump must be a very bad lot indeed. Since, however, Bibi is in disgrace, he is kept in the background while Georgette prepares to receive her filleul. The "lonely soldier" who during the war inspired so many hopeful ladies with romantic dreams and business-like motives, has been the butt of the humorist in all the lands concerned. Generally, it has been decided that he was a married man with a large family who worshipped his fair unknown godmother from afar for the sake of the socks and cigarettes she sent him.

BUT Georgette's filleul is Mr. George Grossmith, known in the play as Max Touquet. Apparently to justify his claim to being a poilu he makes his first appearance with his features entirely surrounded by whiskers. A few moments later, however, he gets a quick shave in the wings, and reappears as the British public knows and likes him best. And as in point of general appearance Max has such a clear advantage over the mere Bibi, we cannot blame Georgette, considering her emotional nationality, for falling into his arms at once. Of course, it is to be distinctly understood that she consents to receive Max's kisses only in the hope of reading her erring husband the lesson he so much needs, and to set him going properly on the path of penitence; but she does not seem to be borne down by the weight of her tremendous sacrifice. Mr. George Grossmith is not, perhaps, a very convincing lover on the stage. It is true he puts his arms nicely round the lady's neck, but he seems all the time anxious that we should understand that he is only doing this sort of thing because it's in the part, and you mustn't think any the worse of Georgette for it. The Winter Garden Theatre audiences will doubtless be to a large extent the latter-day Gaiety public, the flower of British respectability, and you must be careful not to offend the customers.

THE complication then takes its usual course. Colonel Bolinger, Georgette's wealthy uncle, strolling on the scene, catches sight of Max and Georgette kissing each other, and at once decides that they are, therefore, married. I mean, it's such an obvious conclusion for anyone to come to, isn't it? And as he must not be offended on any account, Bibi is forbidden to interfere with the kissing time lest he should miss inheriting uncle's money. He takes his revenge very handsomely, however, by singing to us a song about Woman's inhumanity to Man, or something of that sort, which fairly churns the house up with laughter. The story travels from Fontainebleau to Paris with all the light and colour that one associates with the Gay City at its best. Mr. Grossmith is quite his old light, volatile self, and his duets with Miss Phyllis Dare are among the leading features of the show. Miss Yvonne Arnaud is the sprightly Georgette of the piece, and Mr. Tom Walls gives a most amusing study of the elderly uncle. The mounting is, as may be expected, very rich and tasteful, and the girls are simply lovely. If the Winter Garden Theatre carries on the good old Gaiety tradition there should be some charming additions to the ranks of our peeresses before very long. For the rest, Kissing Time is a good all-round entertainment of the highest class, and the new theatre opens with good wishes and heartiest congratulations to all concerned.

Who is the Prettiest Actress?

"SUMER is icumen in"—and with it pretty frocks, and holidays, and sunshine and all the things that really make life worth living in this generally cloud-girt, foggy island. Is it not, therefore, an appropriate time to turn, just for a moment or two, from the frivolities of Westminster and the dullness of Coal Commissions (even when livened by Dukes) and Transport Troubles, and the ever-depressing "price of things," and consider something really interesting? Who, then, we ask you, is the prettiest actress of the day? We are always—subconsciously, perhaps, but we all do it in one way or another—making comparisons. Readers see actresses' photographs continually in this journal and others, they see Mr. Harris's caricatures of the stage, and last week they saw many of them—in "semi-official life"—at the Theatrical Garden Party. We, therefore, invite readers to make a conscious comparison for once, and send us, on a postcard, the result of their cogitations together with a short note as to the reasons for which they have come to a decision. There are any amount of pretty girls on the stage. Which one is the best-looking these days, and why? One more word—we are not offering any prize.

MES AMIS—

THERE is so great scandal in our circle. It is an affaire. We discuss it all the day like all the rest of the world has discussed so much if Fiume shall belong to the Italians, and we do not find that we ever stop. And how it is interesting.

IT is our sister Mathilde who has made our scandal. Mathilde is older than Lucile. She is a veuve de la guerre because our beaufrère Jacques was killed since four years. Mathilde and I have been sometimes not very good friends. It is so why I do not write much of her, and when Jacques has been killed she has stayed at the château in the Haute Marne, where our home is, and it is only sometimes when she has wished a new hat that she is come to Paris.

"'Le Diable!' said Frédéric"

WHEN they have made of our château a hospital it was Mathilde who has stayed to watch how everything should arrange itself, and she has become an infirmière. Then the Americans have come, and they have taken the château for their hospital, and she has still remained because she speaks a little the English and could help.

SINCE very long she has not written, except to our brother Frédéric to tell of the affairs of the château and how much of our beautiful wood the Americans have cut down to make themselves warm. One had a little forgotten Mathilde, except to think sometimes how it must be sad for her all alone. Then was come the coup de foudre. She is arrived one day in Paris. "Bonjour mes petites sœurs," she has said. "Tiens," we have cried, "it is Mathilde," and we have embraced her very warm.

IT was two days that she has stayed and we have not demanded why she was come. Then Frédéric was come to dine with us en famille and our aunt and our uncle and Monsieur d'Amblard, the brother of our beaufrère Jacques, with his wife. It was when Léonie has served the coffee that Mathilde has made her announcement. "I wish," she has said, "to tell you all that I go to get married." Even I who have the English ideas of the marriage have been shocked that she should so make her announcement. It is not so in France that a lady will act, even when she is a widow, to engage herself without to consult the famille and to say how she will do.

HOW it has been a surprise. "Le Diable!" said Frédéric,

"Bonjour mes petites sœurs" and he has spilled his coffee on the table. "Comment?" Monsieur d'Amblard has cried, and our aunt has made a little squeal like when one pinches the finger. It was a moment of the drama. For the half of a second I have lost the head. But Mathilde looked so calm. "Mes félicitations, chère Mathilde," I have said when I was recovered, and I have kissed her, but I have been frightened because everyone has looked so stern.

"AND to whom," said Frédéric, "peut on demander do you propose to marry yourself?" "Our Mathilde will have chosen very wisely," our aunt has said—and then she has spoken: "He is an Americain."

PERHAPS in England you will not very well understand our emotion. It is sometimes that your girls do like that to choose a husband. But in France and to choose an American—it is a thing incroyable—foudroyant. Everyone was quite still, and Mathilde has stirred the sugar in her coffee. No one has known how to speak. Chink, chink the spoon has made a

The Answer

Is it the influence of the Entente?—or is it the after-the-war spirit which is adding a little extra "chic" to our womenfolk's attire? Whichever it may be, it is certain that in these days, pictorially, it is hard to distinguish the A, C, G, H, K—Paris.

little noise in the cup. One could not support it longer. I have had the fear to laugh, but I have looked at Monsieur d'Amblard, who was older than Jacques, and is an avocat all dry and with the voice of a gramophone. He has the face of thunder. I have determined to support Mathilde. "Venez donc," I have said, "tell us about him our new beaufrère Americain."

MATHILDE has much character. She has smiled to Lucile and I because it has been in our house.

"He has the face of thunder"

"I have taken the liberty, dear sisters," she said, "to ask him to visit us this evening. Now you will excuse me. I go to powder my nose!"

WHEN she was gone, what commotion. Everyone has talked. Mathilde to do such a thing! What species of American has dared to make the court to our sister? Oh, we have been very excited. Our aunt has cried, and Monsieur d'Amblard has demanded that his wife, who is of a proportion colossal, should retire herself and not be exposed to the danger to meet this "Landru—this blue-beard," he has called him. He has wished that we should all retire ourselves. "It is an affair for men," he has said, and made a big chest—he who was embusqué for the whole war. But Lucile has been brave. "We must receive Mathilde's guest," she said, and our uncle has said very quiet: "All the Americans do not lean against the lamp-posts of the Champs Elysées and play ball in the streets."

ALL the same, I have gone to my room and wept two tears that Mathilde should do such a thing—to marry a man with a fat, red face and the hands square like a box. Almost I have had fear to meet him that I should show how angry I was. What ennui while we waited! Mathilde has come back to our salon. "You all look like chickens brought to the market," she said, and has laughed at us.

THEN he was arrived. "Un Lieutenant Americain," our old Léonie has announced, "but I cannot say his name." The American laughed out loud, and has kissed the hand of Mathilde. "He has the manners," said my aunt, and M. d'Amblard who has the ambition to be décoré, but never succeeds, whispered to his wife, "he has the Legion of Honour." For me I have thought first, "he has lost an arm for France."

THEN I have seen how Frédéric was all excited. "Comment? c'est vous! Ah mon vieux, mon vieux!" he has cried—"le seul et unique Americain of the world whom one can tolerate." He has told us how they have made so good adventures together at Château Thierry. It was a surprise that, and Mathilde has been so pleased, and has said when he was gone, "You are content, mon petit frère, that I shall marry with your friend."

"'Un Lieutenant Americain,' our old Léonie has announced"

BUT all the same, though it is so nice an American, vous savey it is an American! and we have not yet told the news to our friends. C'est si banal.

In SWEDEN: The Meet-Book

BY THE CONTINENTAL BYSTANDER

THE Bystander in Sweden has a representative library. It boasts of the Bible, of Shakespeare, of the musings of August Strindberg, and, of course, of his own "Complete Works," led by his "Hymn to Venus Urania." But of all his bibliophilic rarities, he treasures most dearly, fingers most lovingly, consults most assiduously, his thin duodecimo, "The Meet-Book." "The Motbok," it is called in the tongue of Gustav Vasa. It is a wondrous book in that it is never full. New, touching, graceful, imaginative thoughts are written in it every month. (Hurry up, and say what it is.—ED. I won't.—BYST. IN SW.)

IT is a book which millions would like to steal. (Then it's not your pocket-book.—ED. Right for once.

"THE PRICE OF FREEDOM"

"THE BYSTANDER OVERSEAS" (concluded)

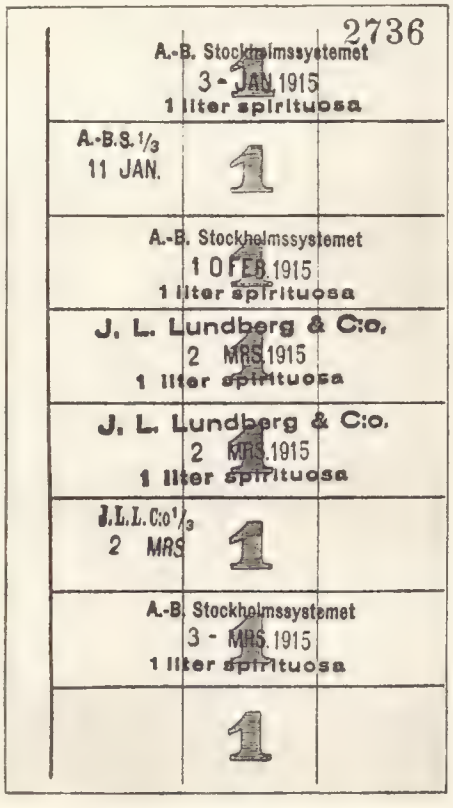
—Byst. in Sw.) It is the work of a gentleman named Ivan——. (Ivan the Terrible.—Ed. Wrong, as usual.—Byst. in Sw.) A gentleman named Ivan Bratt, by profession a modest doctor of medicine, who has lately been in Paris teaching the wise unworkers of the Falling-to-Peaces Conference how to solve the ——. (Question whether the Kutzo-Wallachs of Macedonia are Fire-Worshippers or Wesleyan Methodists.—Ed. Wrong again. Whether people should get drunk or stay sober, and at what times, under what circumstances, and at what price.—Byst. in Sw.)

THE "Meet-Book" is Doctor Ivan's bold solution of the Drink Problem. Dr. Ivan is Scandinavia's greatest man. He has made Drink respectable; he has devised a way by which even on St. Lucy's Day in chill December when every Swede worth looking at quaffs pails of fiery anodynes, people are kept from reeling. The man who achieved that is barely forty; he is good-looking and bland; he is a reformer from childhood; in his native townlet, Jönköping, whence also matches come, he started when schoolboy as peace enthusiast, school-colony fanatic, cheap-tram maniac, and pro-vivisectionist. And then one hazardous afternoon (having first strengthened his nerves with draughts of best aqua vita), he resolved to solve the Drink Problem on lines of Pure Reason.

HE devised the "Meet-Book" system; pushed it on public and legislators; and can to-day claim to have made millions of tipsy citizens sober; to have irremediably smashed the zealots of Teetotalism, and to have enriched private libraries in a grateful way. Dr. Ivan resolved that Teetotalism, Prohibitionism, and Carrie-Nationism were ugly superstitions. But he decided more than that. He decided, too, that drunkards should not get drinks, and that even reasonably sober citizens should not get too much; and that the way to manage this was to sell drinks in bottle only to citizens personally known; and to sell them a fixed amount. So he invented the "Stockholm-System," whose finest literary achievement is the Meet-Book, "The Motbok."

AND the Stockholm-System was duly inaugurated in Stockholm, and has been copied in twenty other Swedish towns. You can still drink your whiskey, aqua vita, or punch in restaurants—as much as you like. But if you want to buy your spirits in bottles, and take them home to your wife, you must first apply for a "Meet-Book." It is a well-written, decently printed volume, with many little oblongs on every page. If you're a known toper, the Stockholm System flatly refuses you a "Meet-Book." If you're not a toper, you can buy your sixteen litres of whiskey or schnaps every quarter; and for every litre you buy a rubber stamp comes down in one of the oblongs of your "Meet-Book." And when you have purchased all sixteen you can get no more till next quarter.



"ONE LITRE OF SPIRITS"
A page from the most precious book in a cultured Swede's library

NATURALLY, the "Meet-Book" is the most precious volume in every library. It's more. It helps you to worldly success as effectively as the best work of Samuel Smiles. That is, if you are not a drinker yourself. In that case, your "Meet-Book" has virgin pages; and when all your friends' "Meet-Books" are stamped up to the shameless sixteen litre limit, you suddenly become a man of importance. Insinuating fellows try to borrow your Meet-Book," or ask you to order for them. People in silk hats, with armourial bearings on their handkerchief corners, who wouldn't look at you yesterday, invite you to dinner to-day. "But, by the way," they seldom forget to telephone, "we somehow lost our 'Meet-Book'; possibly you, dear guest, have not bought up to the limit with yours." Yes; if you use your "Meet-Book" with discretion you may end like the Swedish Bystander's pal, Lieut. Bengt Axelsson Silfverstrahle, and marry the daughter of a cellulose millionaire who happens to want a drink.

AND the effect on public morals? Not bad. Men with aurorean noses can't get drinks; tipsiness is cut down—now only one Stockholmer out of ten is jailed for drunkenness once a year; and the fanatic Teetotal Cause is squashed for ever. But the ointment has flies—the "Meet-Book" has blots. Yearners after delirium tremens' swift delights concoct tremblesome surrogates, like the unhardy Norsemen of whom the Christiania Bystander lately wrote. And new crimes have arisen: stealing "Meet-Books," forging them, killing your best friend because he has one with a promising blank page.

THAT is the honest, impartial truth about the "Meet-Book." Being an alien, and, therefore, allowed to buy schnaps with his passport, the Continental Bystander himself doesn't care a Continental . . .

A New Literary Log

Rolled by Ralph Straus

THERE used to be an unusually comprehensive and altogether remarkable Manual of Etiquette, without which no gentleman's library was really complete. It told you how to behave in polite society. It circumscribed in the most detailed manner the duties of your second footman. For the first time it laid bare the conversational amenities of ducal and other coronetted persons, and it informed you how to address sons of baronets or archbishopesses without making a fool of yourself. Most important of all, it showed your wife how she might scale the giddiest social heights without ever being suspected of "climbing" at all. You made your money, so to speak, and that Manual of Etiquette did the rest. After a careful study of its chapters you arrived, naturally and inevitably, at the top.

THERE have been other Guides to Deportment and Text-Books of Aristocratic Manners, but until the appearance of The Young Visiters [sic] (Chatto and Windus: 3*s.* 6*d.* net) none for me has had a tithe of the charm of that particular Manual. The Young Visiters, however, marks an epoch. Its authoress at the time of its composition was no more than nine years of age, but this is unquestionably the era of young people, and you must not make the mistake of supposing that its gifted authoress, Miss Daisy Ashford, did not know very much more than you or I about the manners of the truly great before she was out of the nursery. It is one thing, however, to teach manners and deportment; it is another to create an imaginative work of art. Miss Ashford, with a twopenny notebook and a healthy love of melodrama at her disposal, did both. And so, although the social historians of the future may be inclined to see in The Young Visiters little more than a scientific picture of manners at the end of the Victorian era, the students of literature will find in it a novel which both in construction and technique is little short of being unique.

SIR JAMES BARRIE and Mr. Frank Swinnerton have between them fathered this volume, and in allowing Miss Ashford's work to appear in the precise form in which it was written I have no hesitation in saying that they have performed a public service. The plot, like all great plots, is almost touchingly simple. The hero, Mr. Salteena, a man of means, is determined to become a gentleman in every sense of the word. The heroine, Ethel Monticue, is determined to marry Bernard Clark, the man of her choice. Both succeed, but at a cost. For Mr. Salteena is also in love with the fair Ethel, who, we are informed, puts "some red ruge on my face because I am very pale owing to the drains in this house," and he speedily and not unnaturally becomes "rarther jellus" of the more fashionable Bernard. The young authoress, however, knows the value of compensation. Mr. Salteena is taken to the "Crystal Pallace," where most of the aristocracy live, and from there it is but a step to Buckingham Palace, where Dukes are "as naught." What more can he expect? And there is no possible doubt that by the time he and the then Prince of Wales, wearing a small but costly crown, are on intimate terms, what he does not know about etiquette is hardly worth knowing.

The Woman Who Would

In fact, the authoress almost goes out of her way to explain to us the intricacies of domestic etiquette. We are shown a whole gallery of menials—from the courteous Horace to the monumental Minnit—whose particular duties are described with a quite extraordinary fidelity. And from the description of the Royal party ambitious hostesses may obtain all the information that can possibly be required in order to make their own receptions a success. The final scene, too, in Westminster Abbey, where Ethel and her Bernard are united in the holy bonds of matrimony, has an appeal of its own. The list of wedding-presents makes your mouth water, and it is hard to keep back a tear for the unfortunate Salteena, when you hear that he grew very lonely and married a maid at Buckingham Palace, ultimately becoming "the father of ten, five of each!" The Young Visiters, I understand, is having a success. Its authoress has now arrived at years of discretion, and very properly has no desire to continue her literary career. It is enough that her reputation has been for all time secured by this one short novel. RALPH STRAUS.

"JAZZED TO THE WORLD"

JAZZING.

By H. DENNIS BRADLEY.

PEACE!
And plenty—
Of Manchurian meat
And miscarried mutton
And mournful mobs
Of struggling serfs
Storming the tube
And besieging the 'bus
Or begging for beer
In plutocrats' pubs
And feeding on fruits of victory
* * * * *
And a very new world
Of parvenu peers
And bung baronets
And niggardly knights,
Whose honours were won
On the fields of finance,
And proud profiteers,
Fed fat by the war,
Now prey on the peace
By filching the fruits of victory.
* * * * *

All this is, of course, merely jazzing with the millennium. It is written in a spirit of mischievous merriment, which might not appear unbecoming in these serious days of peace.

It should not be mistaken as another example of the exuberant decadence of Youth.

While the splendid old men so wisely settle the destinies of the world, Youth should hold its breath—and purse. And Middle Age its sides—with Dionysian laughter.

Age feebly fiddles while Youth brilliantly burns.

* * * * *

It is Pope & Bradley's pleasure to equip young men. They regret they have no time at present to clothe old men. Youth has now to fight to liquidate the legacies of Age.

Incidentally, old men have not the figures to carry Pope & Bradley's clothes. They must be left to wrap themselves in their Treasury notes.

The Cult of the BEAUTIFUL

AMONG the many wonderful sections at Harrods, none is more interesting than that where, in exquisitely appointed surroundings, a woman may obtain any kind of treatment she desires for hair, face, hands, or feet. There is a very clever specialist in all matters pertaining to the toilet, at the service of anyone requiring advice.

The Care of Hair

If, for instance, the hair is becoming prematurely grey, or showing signs of dandruff or undue greasiness, the trouble is diagnosed and treatment decided on and carried out by qualified assistants. Once more restored to its normal health and beauty, it will be a joy to have it shampooed, waved if necessary, and dressed by expert hands which can adapt any coiffure to our individual needs. Great attention is given to tinting hair by expert qualified assistants, and last, but not least, there is a charmingly appointed salon set apart exclusively for attention to children's hair.

Face, Hands and Feet

The strain of the last few years has left its mark, and womenfolk are naturally, and rightly, awakening to new interest in the Cult of Beauty. We may place ourselves with happy confidence in the competent hands of Harrods assistants. Electrolysis is a great feature here, so skilfully and reliably handled at Harrods that success is a foregone conclusion. Hands, again, receive very special attention, and too much cannot be said for the manicure treatment. With regular visits to these clever operators, beautiful hands may be kept beautiful, and hands which have been neglected transformed out of all knowledge. Equal attention is paid to the feet, and skilled chiropody is always available here.

Some of the Secrets

Among Harrods most successful Toilet Preparations is the ideal Oatwheat Cream. It is really capital value at its modest price of two shillings. Its use may be followed up with advantage by Milk of Orchids, a very fine liquid powder. There is, too, a most brilliant nail-polish, the "Navarre," at 2*s.*; an excellent cuticle cream, the "Delorme," at 1*s.* 3*d.*; and the wonderful "Fedora" lotion for the hands.

A Word of Advice

There is never an idle moment in this section of Harrods, and it is always wise to write or 'phone for an appointment. When telephoning, simply ask for "Western 1, Ladies' Hairdressing."

Get it at HARRODS

The more keenly one appreciates Distinction and Charm, the more sure is one to find precisely what one needs at Harrods. In everything will be found that difference that means just all the difference.

GAMES AND PASTIMES

LAWN TENNIS

The Panther of Lawn Tennis

In lawn tennis just now there is only one topic of conversation—the play of the young Australian, Gerald Patterson. At his first appearance in this country, in the Covered Court Championships, he was marked down as a potential champion, and since then he has "gone on from strength to strength." Grass obviously suits him better than the harder surfaces. There is evidence of this in the defeat which he sustained at the hands of his compatriot, Captain P. O'Hara Wood, in Paris last week in the Inter-Allied Services Tournament on hard courts. They are old rivals, and O'Hara Wood knows how to play him as well as anybody, but all the same I doubt whether anyone will prove capable of stopping him on the grass at Wimbledon unless it be his prototype and mentor, the champion, N. E. Brookes.

"THE BYSTANDER" CUP

Which is to be competed for at Bisley in an individual sniping competition, the conditions of which are given on this page. The cup is of silver, value 50 guineas, and is designed and made by the Goldsmiths and Silversmiths Company, of 112, Regent Street, W.

His Winning Hand

Patterson is a man of very fine physique, who knows how to utilise his strength. Your strong man is sometimes apt to be slow and clumsy, but Patterson is as neat and agile as a bantam boxer. His terrific service, comparable, and even in some respects superior, to that of the American "Comet," Maurice McLoughlin, and deadly smashing are his trump cards, but he holds a long suit of volleys and plenty of backing in the way of ground strokes, so that it is hard to keep him away from the net and harder still to beat him when he gets there. He almost invariably wins his own service game, and can generally manage to snatch several of his opponent's, and—well, there you are!

ROWING

The Eights at Oxford

It is just as well to remember that the results of the eights at Oxford last week are not to count. The eights proper do not start till 1920. Last week's racing was a sort of trial trip; the crews started in the 1914 order and the bumps were duly recorded, but they will not affect the positions of the crews, who will again start in the 1914 order next year. Magdalen had easily the fastest crew on the river, and went from third to head, bumping their old rivals, Christchurch and New College, on the first two nights.

SHOOTING

A "Bystander" Cup for Bisley

On this page is reproduced a facsimile of the silver cup which is being presented by THE BYSTANDER to the winner of the Individual Sniping Competition at the forthcoming Bisley Victory Meeting on July 9 to 19. The competition is open to all comers, service rifles, Class C. (provided free at the firing-point) being used. Each competitor will fire ten shots at 200 yards under sniping conditions at a special target difficult to see with the naked eye, and fifteen other prizes besides THE BYSTANDER Cup will be given.

RACING TOPICS: THE DERBY

THE PANTHER A LIKELY WINNER. BY "CARBINE"

What About It?

In one sense it promises to be a "black" Derby. Young Sir Alec Black, having amassed a considerable fortune at Grimsby, turned his attention to the Turf a couple of years ago, and now has the satisfaction of owning the favourite for the Derby. He has already won the Two Thousand Guineas, and I shall be surprised if his handsome colt is beaten in the great race on Wednesday. Here you have another example of "novice's luck" on the Turf. It is true, of course, that Sir Alec has bought bloodstock most lavishly, sparing no expense in order to get the best blood. But how many men have done the same in the past without ever experiencing the joy of winning a classic race? Look at Sir Robert Jardine, Lord Lonsdale, and dozens of other great supporters of the Turf, who have striven in vain to buy or breed a Derby Winner. Through all their racing careers they have never managed to get hold of a horse like The Panther. And so I say "lucky Sir Alec Black!" Even if The Panther fails in his task at Epsom he at least has had the pleasure of possessing the most-discussed racehorse of the year, and he was right when he refused to accept less than 40,000 guineas for him last autumn.

STEPHEN DONOGHUE

The famous jockey, whose many successes have brought his name so much to the fore this season. He will ride Paper Money in the Derby

The Favourite's Rivals

And now let us try to find out from which direction the chief danger to The Panther is threatened. Will Buchan beat him? There was only a neck between them in the Guineas, and Major Astor's colt is nippy and neat, just the sort for the Epsom twists and undulations. But I estimate that The Panther will have made the greater improvement of the two since they met at Newmarket. What about Dominion and Grand Parade? Which is the better of Lord Glanely's pair for the Derby course is hard to say. At the moment of writing Grand Parade

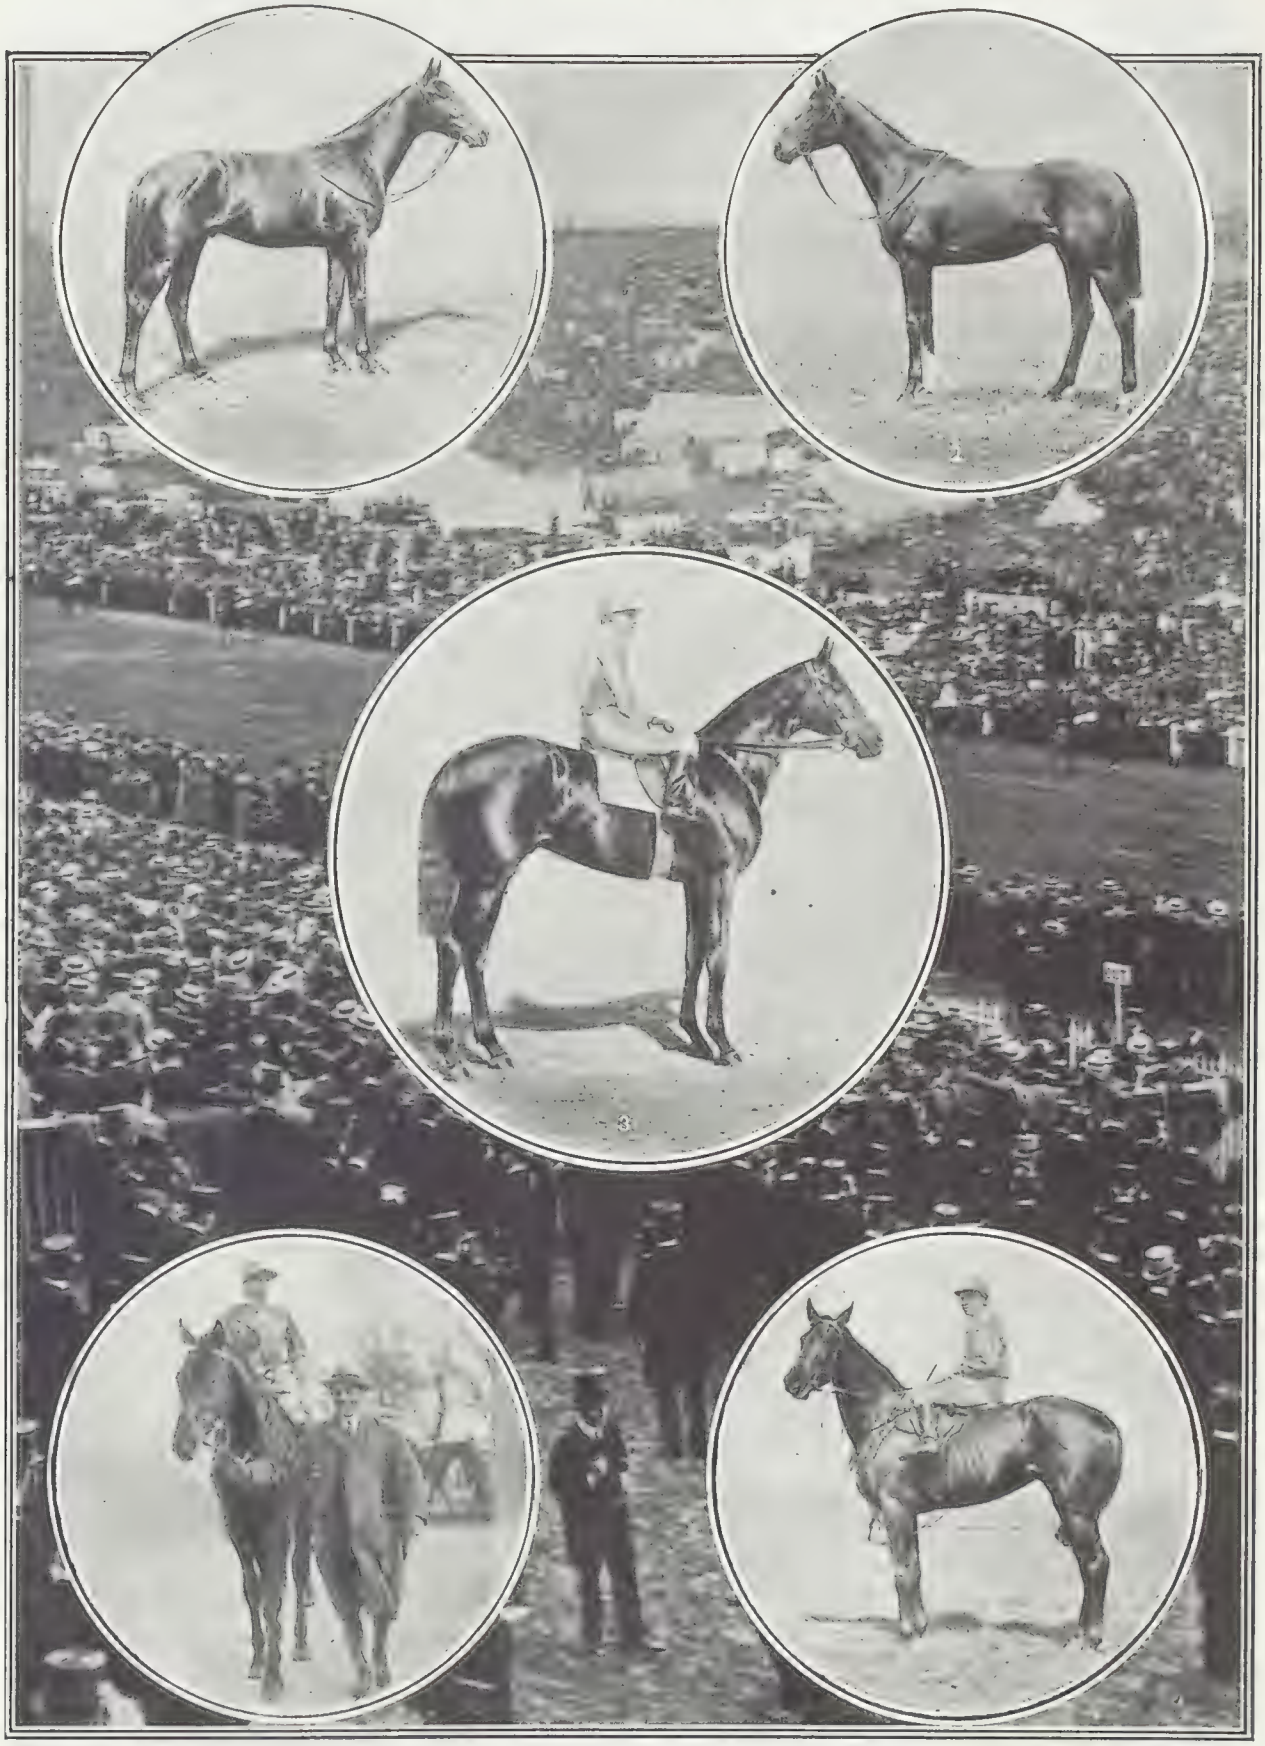
Will It Be a "Black" Derby?



Photographs Rouch, and Sport and General

This week is being run (Police strike permitting) the first after-the-war Derby—and at Epsom once more. Above are some of the most likely runners with the favourite, Sir Alec Black's The Panther, in the centre. (1) Major Waldorf Astor's Buchan, just beaten by The Panther in the Guineas and opposing him again; (2) Sir Walter Gilbey's Paper Money, one of the dangers to the favourite; (3) Sir Alec Black's The Panther (R. Cooper up), a hot Derby favourite and a likely winner; (4) Lady Torrington's All Alone, his sporting owner hopes to see this colt run well; (5) Sir E. Hulton's Roseway, expected to win The Oaks on Friday is the stronger favourite of the two, but I prefer the colt who has shown his merit in public this season. Tangiers will probably run better than he did in the Guineas. He stays well, and is much fancied for a place. So is Milton, but I hardly think this colt is quite up to classic form.

RACING TOPICS (concluded)

A Forecast of the Placings

I regard Paper Money as likely to run into a place. I was not at all displeased with him when he ran against He at Newmarket recently, and the fact that he is to be ridden by Donoghue is all to his advantage. The erratic Sir Douglas may take it into his head to create a surprise, for he is a really good colt when he likes to do his best. But I shall not swerve from the faith I have all along expressed in The Panther. Weeks ago I selected him as the probable winner of the Derby. Since then he has made excellent progress, and you will find him nobly looking the part of favourite when he comes out on parade. My selection, therefore, is The Panther, and I look to BUCHAN and PAPER MONEY to run into places.

OFF TO HAMPTON COURT

The "Vivid" Coach, which has been running for some thirty years between London and Hampton Court, after a break of over four and a half years owing to the war, has now started running daily again, starting from the "Grand Hotel," Northumberland Avenue, at 11.15 a.m. and arriving back at 6.15 p.m., leaving time for a three hours' stay at Hampton

The Oaks

Regarding the Oaks on Friday, I do not think we shall have to look very far for the winner. Providing Roseway comes out fit and well she ought to be a good thing for the fillies' race. The way in which she smothered her field in the One Thousand Guineas was a regular eye-opener, and she ought to beat that lot again comfortably enough. Beresina has not got over the leg trouble which kept her out of the Guineas, but it is possible she may give most trouble to Roseway, who, however, is sure to start a pretty hot favourite, and should win. Whether Lady James Douglas will run Gainsborough for the Coronation Cup on Thursday depends upon the state of the ground. If it is still very hard last year's Derby winner will be kept back until Ascot. In any case I think the Cup will be won by He, who has a good pull in the weights. The Acorn Stakes on Friday may be taken by Cinna, and it will be a pretty race if Saffian is brought out against her.

THE TARRANT TRIPLANE CRASH

As seen from the rear. This plane was the biggest "heavier-than-air" machine ever made, but it unfortunately came to grief at Farnborough on its trial trip while "taxying" over the aerodrome preparatory to flight

Of all classes in this old country of ours that have been doing their bit and have had less thanks for it the motorists are easily first. Their cars were impressed at ridiculous values, and those that had vehicles left with them were abused if they used them. If they asked to join the Motor Transport Column people reproached them for seeking "cushy" jobs, and if they stopped at home their motor businesses had to go to pot to enable their factories to make munitions. Now the public grumble because cars are scarce, and private owners who let the Government have their cars cannot get these back from the clutches of the department who commandeered them. As an instance of the grievances of these latter folk I will relate the experience of a friend of mine who in 1917 jacked up his Rolls-Royce in his garage, meaning to let it rest there until the war was over.

It had not been in his coachhouse in this condition more than a few days when he received a letter from the Admiralty asking him to bring the car to Whitehall for the inspection of a General. To this he replied that this was impossible, as he had now no licence to take the car on the road. A few days later that gentleman notified him that he would come and inspect it at the garage. Down he came, accompanied by another junior staff officer, and when the Great One had left, his subordinate, in apologetic tones, told my friend he had received orders to impress the car. This took place in due course, and after much haggling the Department stated that the price they would pay was £1,300 notwithstanding the special fittings alone on the carriage cost over £200. When my friend asked what remedy he had to get the price increased he was told to go to the County Court. Imagine any patriotic citizen suing the Government in a County Court at that period. So the Rolls-Royce passed into the hands of the Admiralty, and was used as a runabout by the official it was allotted to.

MR. W. M. ILIFF

Managing Director of the Sunbeam Motor Car Company, Limited, and (at the wheel), Mr. L. V. Cozens, Outside Representative of the Company, in a 16-h.p. Sunbeam car

The armistice came, so the original owner asked that now the war was practically over could not his car be returned to him, and he would repay the cash they had sent him less an agreed amount for depreciation? I need not recapitulate the correspondence that ensued, but finally the Admiralty stated that the car was no longer required, so it had been turned over to the Disposal Board to deal with. Wisely my friend then laid the facts before the Automobile Association, of which he was a member, and they took the matter up with the department. I have only seen the extracts of these letters as supplied in their communications to my friend, but judge his astonishment when the Disposal Board insisted that he should pay them £2,600, or double the price the car was commandeered for, and made a favour of that. He is going to pay, and probably has done so before these lines are in print, but it reveals a pretty piece of work in the nature of profiteering that deserves all the publicity it can get.

As for justice, the only remedy that is now possible is that the case will have to be laid before the Claims, Losses Commission, and goodness knows only when my friend will see any of his money back, even if he is lucky enough to get this judgment in his favour. Surely all the cars that were forcibly taken from private to public use ought to be returned if possible to their original owners, and if they have been ruined there are plenty of vehicles that are Government property that could be offered as replacements.

This is a matter I hope both the A.A. and the R.A.C. will take up, as their members were particularly sufferers in having their vehicles impressed and to-day cannot replace them at 100 per cent. over the amount they had to accept when they were asked to give their cars for the national service.

That old friend of motorists, Mr. "Dunlop," is remarking on the number of cases of tyre trouble seen on the roads to-day. As a tyre specialist, "he" states that there is as much need for overhauling motor tubes on cars that have been laid up as there is need for overhauling the engine. Rubber won't last for ever, so that its qualities that make it so excellent for its job also provide for its limitation. Consequently it is just as well to fit new tubes before bringing out the old 'bus on the road again. Lucky are they that have old cars to use and who have not been tempted to part with them at their weight in gold—I mean paper gold, of course. For myself, my commandeered Straker-Squire will never return, I fear, so I am at present inspecting motor-scooters.

MOTORING AND AVIATION (concluded)

RIBALD acquaintances suggest that they are quite the proper mount for an old gentleman, and a speed of three to twenty miles an hour is most appropriate to a "ticket" holder with endorsements. In the meantime I am getting my balance back—not in my bank, alas!—by practising on a push-bike, so if one day these notes cease sudden like you will all know that—well, I have just scooted. Not having been selling munitions to a thankful country, and no chance of excess profits, I can only look for either a rapid decline in present prices or winning one of the various "sweeps" for the Derby to enable me to buy a frame carrying four wheels and a power motor. Candidly, I would have a Rudge-Multi if I were twenty years younger, as that motor-bike has gears and plenty of them to suit all gradients.

MOTOR-BIKES as solo machines so far do not run into three figures, and usually are good value. This Rudge-Multi won the Senior Tourist Trophy (cycles) ran in the Isle of Man in 1914, but war prevented it being put on the market until recently, so that the general users of this form of vehicle have had no chance to become owners. "Now's your chance," as the little girl said in her prayers when her mother had promised her a beating for her waywardness. OLD HY.

FASHION'S FANCIES

BY MRS. JACK MAY

Seasonable Frocks and Hats

THE latest recruit to the garden-party galère in the way of fabrics are net and lace. An all-lace frock of delicate vellum tint, arranged in some simple flounced fashion, with a telling ribbon waist drapery, and worn with a picturesque leghorn chapeau, is difficult to beat for summer elegance; and for young girls there are the sweetest organdi muslins in pale yellow, pink, and lavender, than which nothing can surpass for cool prettiness. Organdi, too, has just a suspicion of crispness that appeals to me personally very much. And they can be made most old-world and quaint with the prevailing short sleeves and décolleté bodices.

Handkerchief Lawn

STRIPES appear to be soaring ahead steadily, and are invading every sort and kind of material. Natural Shantung, prettily striped at wide intervals with a colour, is making up gowns that are at once smart and sensible, and striped handkerchief lawn is likewise a fabric to bear in mind. For either of these "Noreen's" first original suggestion would serve, the stripes being used the reverse way for hem and pocket to bring about variety, with a self shade for the collar and cuffs, and long cravat ends. What a dream of comfort to step into for morning wear in the country, the short sleeves ready for an intervening game of tennis, and a shady hat of Bangkok straw, tipped well over the eyes to add the requisite touch of chic.

A delicate self-coloured handkerchief lawn is also responsible for some of the most distracting little frocks, the prettiest whereof rely exclusively for decoration on white open-work stitching, devised to form lines or squares. These are not cheap, however, though they wear well, wash well, and there are no two opinions as to their fascinating appearance.

AN ORIGINAL SUGGESTION IN SHANTUNG

For a garden-party frock. The stripes are used the reverse way on hem and pocket to bring about variety

Seasonable Chapeaux

THAT the Parisian has set the hall-mark of a full approval on the Cabriolet hat is pretty well known, and shapes that are not strictly Cabriolet—the which boast a high crown and assertive poke brim—display sufficient indications to pass as such. Sometimes the brim is turned up in front, which to certain faces is infinitely more becoming; but for her play on the fancy "Noreen" (on the next page) has adhered to the poke, the actual hat being effected in transparent black Chantilly lace, with le dernier cri in floral posies. This is of roses and wild flowers mixed, and falls off at the back in a careless, rather untidy fashion, a similar posy being thrust through the sash of the accompanying gown. Taking a decisive sweep at the one side, the mushroom shape illustrated is of black Lisère, the brim edged with metal tissue in shot-green and gold, and the crown wholly concealed in front by ears of green ribbon, deftly manipulated to have the effect of pointed leaves. Although of more practical genre, this is the type of hat that goes perfectly with the fashionable straight chemise style of frock of black charmeuse, the skirt trimmed with three rows of deep silk fringe.

Ciro's Beautiful Pearls in a New Home

It is almost superfluous at this date to eulogise the beauty and charm of "Ciro" pearls, these exquisite counterfeit gems having assumed a place of unquestioned importance in the world of dress. But what, perchance, may be news to many is the recent removal from 42, Piccadilly, to new and more commodious premises at 39, Old Bond Street. To make this new home fully worthy of its precious wares the greatest taste has been displayed throughout the entire decorative scheme. A delicate shade of grey with white panelling is the colouring selected for the entrance and staircase, a dainty refreshing nuance that finds a delightful contrast in the tender green and white panelled walls of the charming showroom on the first floor. Almost it seems as though one was immediately transported to the Rue de la Paix, so essentially Parisian is the entire atmosphere of this exclusive little salon, where on tables carefully arranged to catch the best light and conduce in every way to the comfort and convenience of clients the wonderful pearls can be seen and handled in all their rare beauty and wide range of choice.

Smart Footwear

It is something in these days to find footwear that is at one and the same time smart, thoroughly reliable, and moderately priced. But this is a trio of virtues that most assuredly characterises every pair of boots and shoes sold by the "Saxone" Shoe Company, 5-6, Coventry Street, W. Men know to a nicety how very much depends upon the immaculate fit and appearance of their boots and shoes, and the very most fastidious will find all that is best and most desirable here. The latest fancy is for a dark brown shoe, and this,

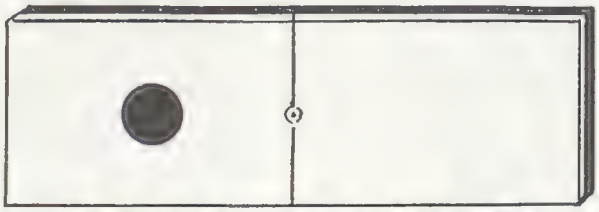
URODONAL



THE ONE

Fact which experience has taught Mankind is that Cause is followed by Effect. It therefore ensures that the Effect cannot be removed until the Cause has been rooted out.

THE torture of chronic or constantly recurrent Rheumatism, the agony of Gout, the depressing burden of Indigestion, the sallow complexion, luck-lustre eyes, the listlessness and general depression usual among sufferers from any of these ailments—are all EFFECTS. It is useless to take so-called "cures" for rheumatism, gout, indigestion, etc., etc.; to rub all kinds of ointments, lotions, etc., into the skin, or to spend an enormous amount of nervous energy in endeavouring to cultivate cheerfulness and good humour. These methods only deal with the EFFECT, whereas it is the CAUSE that must be attacked—the poison which is slowly poisoning the blood and clogging the entire system—URIC ACID.

URODONAL dissolves the uric acid as easily as hot water dissolves sugar: it cleanses the liver, purifies the blood and tissues, renders the joints supple, cleanses the kidneys and restores life and tone to the whole system. Moreover, URODONAL, though so active in its effects, is absolutely harmless.

Menthoclone

This is a pleasant and efficacious combination which is rapidly superseding the old-fashioned menthol cone on account of its being much more rapid in effect and more agreeable in use. When first applied to the skin there is the delightful coldness caused by the evaporation of the Eau de Cologne, followed soon afterwards by the pleasant pain dispelling glow of the menthol. It is made by Dubarry et Cie, 81, Brompton Road, S.W. 1.

Vanishing Cream

Our readers will be delighted to learn that the ever-fragrant Pond's Vanishing Cream is at last once more procurable in the shops. During the war the proprietors experienced great difficulty in obtaining the ingredients used in this original preparation, and so, very wisely, we think, decided it was better to withdraw temporarily from the market rather than "carry on" with an inferior or makeshift substitute. We understand that all chemists and stores now have ample supplies of this excellent non-greasy cream.

Nature's Tonic Food

Everyone needs a tonic at one time or another. Anxiety, worry, or overwork inevitably lead to lack of vitality, nervous strain, and a feeling of being "run-down" and "below par." What is needed to restore health and vitality is not a stimulant or drug, which will merely whip up the jaded energies, but a tonic food, which will restore and rebuild the wasted brain and body cells. Ovaltine is well known to be such a tonic food. It supplies, in a highly concentrated form, the vitalising and reconstructive elements of Nature's tonic foods, malt, milk, and eggs, and is easily and completely assimilated even when the digestive functions are weakened. Ovaltine makes a delicious beverage, to be taken between meals or instead of other beverages at meal times.

Don't be "Just too Late"

They are precious minutes if it means missing your train. They sometimes count in hard cash if you fail to keep an appointment and lose a business transaction. Don't own a watch that makes you late, or gets you there too soon. Be on time with a Waltham, the world's best watch. Accurate, reliable, and durable for a lifetime.

Waltham Watches

Prices vary according to the grade of movement selected. Especially recommended: "Vanguard" and "Riverside" grades. Waltham Watches are obtainable from reliable watchmakers and jewellers. Waltham movements are fitted in cases made by the Dennison Watch Case Co., Birmingham.

THE MENU

AN "OUT-OF-DOORS" AT-HOME

FOIS GRAS AND HAM SANDWICHES
TARTINES À LA REINE (CHICKEN SANDWICHES)
ANCHOVY AND EGG SANDWICHES
LOBSTER OR PRAWN SANDWICHES
TOMATO SANDWICHES
FRUIT SALAD
MERINGUES WITH BANANA CREAM
ORANGE CAKE. SHORT BREAD
RICH PLUM CAKE. ICED COFFEE

SUMMER has burst upon us so suddenly that I am sure many people will be thinking of al fresco entertainments. In the suggested menu there is an abundant supply of sandwiches, which are generally more appreciated than so many cakes.

Tartines à la Reine (Chicken Sandwiches)

Cut cold chicken into very thin slices, pour over it a good béchamel sauce, and make into sandwiches.

Anchovy and Egg Sandwiches

Pound some boned anchovies and hard-boiled yolks of eggs with butter, place between slices of bread and butter, and some mustard and cress.

Lobster or Prawn Sandwiches

Pound some lobster with a little anchovy butter, and make into sandwiches. Prawns or shrimps may be used instead of lobster.

Tomato Sandwiches

Skin the tomatoes, mask with mayonnaise sauce, and make into sandwiches. They can be varied by being made with sliced tomatoes and grated Parmesan cheese

Fruit Salad

Make some syrup by boiling three-quarters of a pint of water, ½ lb. of castor sugar, and the juice from a tinned pineapple. Lay the pineapple in a glass bowl cut in small slices, two oranges in quarters (the seedless ones if possible), two bananas also cut up, and some grapes. Pour over the syrup, which must be nearly cold. Serve with cream.

Orange Cake

Separate the yolks from the whites of four eggs, and beat the yolks and 6 oz. of castor sugar to a cream. Then add the grated end of one and a half oranges, the juice of one, and 4 oz. of flour stirred in gradually. Lastly, add the four whites, beaten to a stiff froth, and over all the mixture scatter two teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Bake for forty minutes in a good oven. EMILIA

YOUR HAIR
PERMANENTLY WAVED
by MARCEL'S
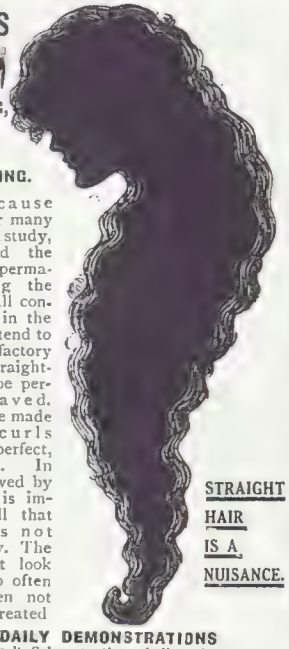
surpasses all and will defy
SHAMPOOING, TURKISH BATHS or SEA-BATHING.



This is because Marcel's, after many years of careful study, have perfected the method of permanently waving the hair to resist all conditions which in the ordinary way tend to give unsatisfactory results. The straightest hair can be permanently waved. Short hairs are made into small curls producing a perfect, natural effect. In fact, when waved by Marcel's it is impossible to tell that the hair is not naturally wavy. The hair does not look frizzy, as is so often the case when not properly treated are given at Marcel's Salons to those ladies who care to call at any time, but if it is not convenient to call, there are inexpensive devices by which ladies may wave their own hair at home with just the same permanent effect. The outfits also produce quite natural and soft waves no matter whether you use the Marcel "Perm" Outfit for £3 10s. "Grand Perm B" Outfit for £4 4s., or the "Grand Perm A" Outfit for £6 6s. The only difference lies in increased simplicity of use with increased cost. We shall be delighted to send to any address copies of testimonials and full particulars of the MARCEL PERMANENT WAVING OUTFITS FOR HOME USE on receipt of the coupon at foot duly filled in.

FREE DAILY DEMONSTRATIONS
These outfits are specially suitable for use abroad, and for countries where heat, damp and tropical conditions prevail. This has been proved over and over again by testimonials received.

The DULCITONE

A Harp-Toned Light-Weight Piano that never needs Tuning.

THIS delightful little instrument, with keys and touch like a good piano, is just the thing for an evening's music by the fireside, in the garden, on board ship, or an impromptu concert or dance. The sounds are produced by tuning forks which are unaffected by change of climate. Can be easily moved about as it weighs only 60lbs. Compass 5 octaves. In the Colonies and abroad the Dulcitone is invaluable.

Look at these Illustrations

They are two of our Overalls—not as we imagine they appear, but as they actually do appear on the average woman. Note the ample length, the fulness of the skirts, the freedom in the sleeves, the useful pockets. Look at the serviceable character of the designs—there is nothing fanciful about them to hamper the wearer's movements, yet each has a well-defined style and attractive appearance. They are Overalls that any lady can put on with pleasure and work in with comfort. Frazerton Overalls are double-seamed throughout, the stitches cannot rip, and there are no raw edges to fray in the wash. They are made from good durable material and so well finished that they might almost be called reversible, And they are GUARANTEED—if any flaw in the workmanship or damage in the material is found in any Overall bearing the Frazerton Tab it will be immediately replaced or the purchase money refunded. So you see, there are no end of good reasons why you should wear FRAZERTON OVERALLS in preference to all other makes.

Black Knight DYES OF ALL COLOURS

The returning Crusader who brought beautiful brilliants and jewels of many colours to his lady, was no more welcome than "Black Knight" is to-day.

For "Black Knight"—the all British dyes brings the wonderful secrets in colour—once the possession of German dyers to British women. The most vivid of tints, or the most delicate of intermediate shades can be obtained if you ask for "Black Knight Dyed."

The "Black Knight" Dyeing Process is a triumph of British research and British skill. Originally used for black only, its success was such that it was soon applied to a wide range of all the most fashionable colours. When choosing Sports Coats, Jumpers, Scarves, Hose, etc., you should ask "Is this Black Knight Dyed?"

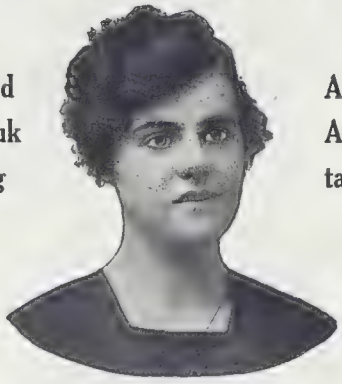
POISONED FINGER



Splendid Zam-Buk Healing Averted Ampu-tation.

"I ran a needle into my index finger," said MISS BLANCHE DALE, of 2, Caistor House, 8, Colsterworth Road, Tottenham, London, N. "The finger became inflamed and swollen with poison.

"At the hospital my finger was lanced in three places, and the surgeon said that part of the bone was diseased. After enduring much agony I used Zam-Buk. Soon after applying the balm the corruption began to come away from my poisoned finger, and I got great relief.

"A splinter of bone that had prevented the place healing came away after further Zam-Buk dressings, and before long my finger was perfectly sound again. Zam-Buk certainly saved my finger from amputation."

HOLBORN, LONDON, E.C.1

Grey Hair banished in 30 minutes.

Demonstrations in London are attracting great scientific and public attention. A Paris physician-scientist (a distinguished member of the Paris Faculty) has discovered a simple method of restoring the lost colour inside each and every grey hair upon the head.
Among the many who have had their hair restored by the new "Inecto" process is a well-known Royal Princess who writes: "'Inecto' has given me the greatest satisfaction." Already over 1,500 Court and other leading hairdressers have given up all other methods in favour of the "Inecto" process.
BYSTANDER readers are invited to call at the London "Inecto" Salons and see living proof of the truly wonderful "Inecto" triumph over greyness. Readers at a distance should write for illustrated Treatise, explaining how this valuable process can be carried out quite easily in the privacy of one's own home or room. Ask for Treatise No. 47, enclose 2d. in stamps to cover return postage, etc., and state if for lady or gentleman. Write at once to Inecto, Ltd., Dept. B.S., 15a, North Audley Street, London, W.1.
